'Dub Section' presents 45 minutes of re-imagined instrumentals signifying a return to dub and reggae for indie artist, writer and producer, Tim Jones, who has been releasing music as Brynovsky since 2010.

From his studio in Scotland he has recycled and mashed up tracks from his back catalogue in true dub style and has been sneaking out one track every week on Soundcloud and YouTube ahead of the full release in January 2024. Tim has been complimented on his dub skills by music pros over the years and has raised more than a few eyebrows in the reggae community after Brynovsky supported Yellowman, The Abyssinians and The Congos.

His third and previous album, Future Weather (2020), steered a committed line through political pop and reflective mantra to thickly-layered dub tones and harmonies, where the "sweet, sweet sounds of Brynovsky" (Fresh on the Net, 2014) were matched against inequality, climate change and the rise of populism, post-truth and polarisation.

Legendary artist and DJ, Tom Robinson has given Brynovsky a couple of spins on his BBC 6Music show and now, via the remixing and processing of his own masters, Tim is offering up Dub Section for 2024.
